HAD HOPED FOR FISH BUT DINE ON CORNED BEEF AND CABBAGE

A jolly party of fishermen left Daly City at 4 o'clock last Sunday morning, bound for Steamboat slough, between Isleton and Walnut Grove. Arriving there at 7 o'clock, they assembled their tackle and started in to fish, with the hope of securing a sufficient number of striped bass to serve to the members of Crocker Lodge No. 454, F. & A. M., at a banquet which they proposed to give following the meeting Tuesday night. Sad but true, corned beef and cabbage was served Tuesday night, so you can judge for yourself just how successful the fishermen were.

George Henry claims to have caught the biggest fish, although no one saw him catch it. He was seen negotiating with an old Chinese fisherman, so the other fishermen have their doubts as to his claims.

The closest Jim Miller came to catching a fish was when he stuck the hook into his own finger. His friends were in doubt as to his nationality until he was seen fishing without bait on his hook.

The members of the party arrived home at 7 p. m., very tired, but greatly pleased with the day's outing, even if they did not bring back the limit.

The fishermen were George Henry, Peter Pavlos, Martin Johnson, Henry Elmers, George Putney, Andrew McKeown, James Syme, Walter Hughes, "Shorty" Walter Rucker, Peter Barsi, Jim Miller, Leslie Lampard, M. Reynard, of Lawdale, Charles Grantz, Charles Ross and son, Bob Parkison, Bill Kahrau.

Following the regular meeting last Tuesday night of Crocker Lodge, the long looked for "fish feed" took place, but instead of serving fish, the committee in charge had provided corned beef and cabbage.

The fishermen came in for a good deal of good natured "roasting" by the members, who, however, accepted the numerous excuses given, and admitted that the "feed" was up to the usual Crocker Lodge standard, even though the fishermen did fall down on the job.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS ADD NEW MEMBERS

El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, Native Daughters of the Golden West, held and interesting meeting Wednesday evening, when many new names were added to its membership roll. The ritualistic work was exemplified by the officers of the Parlor under the direction of their president, Mrs. Sylvia Fischer. Music was provided by the Parlor's organist, Mrs. Ida Doyle. Delicious refreshments were served at the close of the meeting, the tables being prettily decorated in Hallowe'en colors and favors.

Gifts of silver were presented to the Parlor's four new brides, Mrs. Erminia Biggio Riccommi, Mrs. Clara Foppiano Tacchi, Mrs. Helene Devlin Cancille and Mrs. Louise Gregoire Grandona.

Plans are now being perfected for the Parlor's annual Christmas party for the children. This will take place on December 21.

EASTERN STAR MEMBERS SELECT OFFICERS FOR 1928

At the regular meeting of Crocker Chapter No. 382, Order of the Eastern Star, held at the Masonic Temple last Monday night, the members selected their officers for the 1928 term, the following being chosen: Mrs. Florence Stockton, Worthy Matron; Dr. E. P. Norwall, Worthy Patron; Mrs. Alma Parkinson, Associate Matron; Mrs. Louise Aitchison, Conductress; Mrs. Ada Van Valkenburg, Associate Conductress; Miss Vera McDonald, Secretary; Mrs. Jeannette Fischer, Treasurer.

Crocker Chapter is in a flourishing condition and the members are looking forward to an even better year during the next term.

NEW YORK VISITOR PRAISES DALY CITY

R. W. Owen, of Utica, N. Y., was the guest last week of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Williams, of 109 Santa Cruz avenue, Daly City. Mr. Owen holds the position of Superintendent of Maintenance of Way with the New York State Railways and is on a two months trip through the Canadian Rockies and the Pacific Northwest, visiting friends in Portland, Oregon, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Mr. Owens was very favorably impressed with Daly City, and had many complimentary remarks to make about the city. He will have much to tell his friends back East about the wonders of the West.

POPULAR COUPLE ARE UNITED IN WEDLOCK

The wedding of Miss Louise Gregoire and Mr. Raymond Grandona, of South San Francisco, which took place last Saturday evening, November 5, was an unusually pretty affair. The nuptial mass was read by the Rev. Father James P. Donohoe at 7 o'clock at St. Maximus church. The altar and chancel were beautifully decorated with huge bunches of white chrysanthemums and ferns. Mrs. R. Kelley presided at the organ and Miss C. Stanley sang "I Love You Truly" and "Avi Maria."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, William Gregoire, wore a gown of white chiffon heavily embroidered in silver and silver beads. The long bridal veil was of white tulle, edged wtih lace, and fell from a crown of pearls and orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet was of orchids, lilies of the valley and gardenias.

Miss Mildred Grandona was maid of honor and wore a pink chiffon gown, embroiderd and beaded in gold. She carried a huge bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Freda Christen, one of the bridesmaids, was gowned in orchid silk and carried a beautiful bouquet of orchid pansies, while Miss Alma Passalacqua, the other bridesmaid, wore a pretty gown of pink silk and carried pink bridesmaid roses.

The little flower girls, Florence Arata and Yvonne Gregoire, were dressed alike in pink silk dresses, the skirts entirely covered with tiny ruffles, and bands of silver flowers holding down their pretty blonde curls. They carried baskets of mixed flowers and maidenhair ferns.

Nicholas Gregoire, in a little white satin suit, was ring bearer.

Mr. George Castiglio was best man and John Winant the usher.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gregoire, has lived at 40 Peoria street since childhood. She is a popular member of the Native daughters and also the drill team, and is associated with her father in the floral business, having two shops in Lawndale.

After the church services, a dinner was served to the following relatives and intimate friends in the basement of the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Greene, 54 Peoria, street, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion:

Mr. and Mrs. Grandona and family, Mr. and Mrs. L. Gregoire and family, Mr. and Mrs. Passalacqua and family, Mrs. Winant and family, Mr. and Mrs. Cerquentini, Mr. and Mrs. Maggi, Mr. and Mrs. Tasscero, Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Cerquentini, Mr. and Mrs. E. Winant, Mr. and Mrs. C. Winant, Mr. and Mrs. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. J. Gregoire, Mr. and Mrs. B. Gregoire, Mr. and Mrs. E. Greene, Mr. and Mrs. Church, Mr. and Mrs. Stamatis, Mr. and Mrs. A. Arata, Mrs. E. Parker, Miss Mary Nolan, Miss Amelia Laurent, Miss Adeline Laurent, Miss Mildred Grandona, Miss Alma Passalacqua, Miss Frede Christen, George Castiglio, William Gregoire, John Winant.

A large pyramid wedding cake occupied the center of the table, being a gift from the South San Francisco bakery.

At 9 o'clock a reception was held in the basement of the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Arata, 58 Peoria street, which also was decorated with pink and white streamers and greens. A three piece orchestra furnished music for dancing.

On Monday morning the bride and groom left for a honeymoon trip to Southern California, and upon their return will live in the pretty Spanish home built by B. Milano at 500 Templeton avenue.

MASKED BANDIT TAKES RUBY; BUT RETURNS WEDDING RING

Held up in their home by a masked man armed with a gun, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lewis, of 166 San Diego avenue, were robbed of a small sum of money and a $125 ruby ring last Monday night.

It seems that Mrs. Lewis had gone to the front door of their home to see if it was raining, when she noticed a man coming up the front steps. She believed the visitor to be a neigbor until he produced a revolver, and told her to lead the way into the house, when he took her purse and then stripped the ruby ring and her wedding rnig from her finger. Mr. Lewis, who was in another room, happened to step into the room as the robber was taking the rings, and he was also immediately covered by the robber's gun and forced to give up what change he had on his person. The robber returned Mrs. Lewis' wedding ring when her husband protested, saying: "Don't be a cheap skate."

After the bandit had returned the wedding ring, he backed out of the front door and disappeared as quietly as he had appeared on the scene.

ANNUAL RED CROSS ROLL CALL OF THIS COUNTY UNDER WAY

Completion of plans for the eleventh annual "roll call" of San Mateo county chapters of the Red Cross is announced by the county chairman, Miss Helen P. Chesebrough. This year's roll call will start Armistice day (today) and will continue through Thanksgiving day.

As the Red Cross has demonstrated in the past its willingness to help, has helped, and always stands ready to help in an emergency, it is thought very likely that the citizens will respond willingly and quickly with the annual request for funds to carry on the work.

Miss Chesebrough said that the quota of this county would probably be similar to that of last year, and that it was her hope that a quick response would be made to this year's appeal.

San Mateo county is divided into the following districts, with the following chairmen: Belmont, Mrs. E. J. Heartsner; North Burlingame, Ernest Rickard; Burlingame, P. P. Rorke; Colma, Mrss. P. B. Henderson; Daly City, Mrs. H. A. Rickman; Half Moon Bay, O. Olesen; Hillsborough, Mrs. Gordon Hitchcock; La Honda, Mrs. Archie Woodhams; Lomita Park, Mrs. Herbert Skellinger; Millbrae, Mrs. G. L. Davis; Montara, Mrs. Lillie Kent; Moss Beach, Guy Smith; Pescadero, Edwin Williman; San Bruno, R. A. Rapsey; San Carlos, Mrs. W. H. Gatchell; San Mateo, Edmund Levy; Salada Beach, Miss M. Crosby.

CHURCH TO OBSERVE EDUCATIONAL WEEK

The services at the Daly City M. E. church next Sunday evening will be in the nature of a celebration of National Education Week. The principal speaker on this occasion will be Professor Ferguson, principal of the Jefferson Union high school. It is also expected that there will be some special numbers from the grammar schools.

A special invitation is extended to the parents and friends of the high school and grammar school students, and particularly to the members of the Parent-Teachers' Associations. Make it a point to be present. Mr. McGregor and Mr. Broom are arranging special musical numbers. It will be worth while.

We have started the Wednesday evening prayer meetings, which begin promptly at 7:30 and close at 8:30. It will give you added strength to face the hardships as well as the joys of life, if you will but take a few minutes on Wednesday evening and join with us in our prayer service.

The Epworth League will hold three meetings this week, beginning on Monday evening at 7:30, also Wednesday and Friday evening at the same hour. This week is set aside by the Leagues all over the country as "Win My Chum" week. The goal that we hope to reach is not difficult but altogether possible; each Leaguer winning his or her chum to Christ.

Don't forget the Sunday morning service at 11 o'clock and Sunday school at 10 o'clock.

The Ladies' Aid Society will hold a social on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, in the church. All are invited. The only admittance charge will be some article, large or small, that can be sold at the bazaar, soon to be held.

E. L. FISHER, Minister.

ENTERTAINS MANY FRIENDS AT HALLOWE'EN GATHERING

Miss Margie O'Connor was hostess at a Hallowe'en party Saturday night, given at her home on Evergreen avenue. A large cardboard skeleton beckoned the guests to enter, while black cats and witches peeped from behind chairs and tried to look more gruesome than the pumpkins and decorations that adorned the rooms. During the evening the guests danced to the tune of Bill Lewis' Collegians. During intermissions many games, such as the Cats-Meow, etc., were played. At 12 o'clock the guests adjourned to the dining room, which was beautifully decorated in orange and black and offset by large vases of various colored chrysanthemums.

Among those present were: Misses Audrey Diamond, Tessie O'Connor, Cora Gaspardone, Bessie Hulton, Margie Varni, Ruth St. Dennis and Margie O'Connor; Messrs. Louis Ehrling, Richard McCarthy, David Ferguson, Jack McDonald, Vincent Jones, Rod Roesling, Eddy St. Dennis, Jimmy Redrick, Nick Schoplein, Bill Lewis and Joseph Rooney; Mr. and Mrs. F. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. H. Hegeney, Mr. and Mrs. G. King, Mr. and Mrs. J. Ferro, Mr. and Mrs. E. Trier, Mr. and Mrs. W. Fricke, Mr. and Mrs. J. O' Connor, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Wall and Mrs. Helena O'Connor.

WORK UNDER WAY DREDGING CHANNELS FOR BIG BAY SPAN

Two crews of workmen, each 100 strong, began to draw pay last week from the Raymond Construction company, general contractors for the San Mateo-Hayward bridge across San Francisco bay.

Dredging channels through the mud flats stretching from the bay shores to the mile-wide channel in the center of the bay is the task laid out for the men now on the job, according to M. M. Upson, manager of the construction company. With water averaging but three feet in depth over more than five miles of bay bottom from the eastern side and approximately two miles of the same conditions on the western side, working channels must be cut for pile drivers. As these channels are cut huge pile drivers will start the gigantic task of sinking thousands of 30-foot piles for the frame work of the tressels leading from each shore to the bridge proper across the main channel.

In connection with the starting of actual work on the immense span across the bay, crews of road builders began Monday to construct the approach to the bridge from Third avenue San Mateo. According to plans made known by officials of the construction company, the bridge boulevard in San Mateo county will be an extension of Third avenue to the bay shore, thence over a new 200-foot levy to Little Coyote Point, where the bridge head will be located.

All rights-of-way have been secured, it is stated, with the exception of one stretch through the A. Schilling property. On the Alameda county side the way is clear straight from the state highway to the bridge head, the bridge promoters state.

Due to the physical conditions and problems, all work for the first six or eight months will be of a preliminary nature, it is said.

PRINCIPAL OF SCHOOL PRAISES POLICE CHIEF

The following letter of appreciation was recently received by Chief of Police Jack Doyle:

"As principal of the Jefferson Union high school, I wish to express to you my appreciation of your prompt and efficient handling of the recent burglary case at the high school which I referred to you. The fact that the guilty party was apprehended in less than four hours after I reported the incident to you speaks most highly for your administration of the police department of our city.

Very sincerely,
JAMES FERGUSON, Principal."

The case referred to by Principal Ferguson was the burglary which occurred at the high school on the night of October 31. The sewing department of the school had been entered and a quantity of childrens' dresses being made for the Red Cross stolen. Arriving at the school early next morning, Mr. Ferguson discovered that a window had been broken and burglary committed. He immediately got in touch with Chief Doyle and together they checked up on all the missing articles. The chief secured several articles with distinct finger prints.

Chief Doyle lost no time in getting in touch with the police departments of surrounding cities, including San Francisco, giving information that would be of service in helping identify the person who committed the burglary. The result was that with the co-operation of the San Francisco police department, Chief Doyle had the guilty party in his custody within less than four hours and secured from him a complete confession. He proved to be a boy of 18 or 19 years of age, who had just recently come from one of the middle west states, where he had been in similar trouble. Upon being questioned he confessed that he had broken into other schools in San Francisco and Daly City. The case will come up for trial in the local court within a few days.

DRIVER HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Tony Matijasevich, of 171 Brannan street, San Francisco, had a close call last Sunday at 6:30, when his car skidded as he was coming down Mission street. The car went onto the sidewalk, hit a pole and then skidded through a fence and down into the front yard of Mrs. Block's home at 6468 Mission street, a fall of about 15 feet. A crowd gathered quickly, expecting to find some one seriously injured, but the driver of the skidding car escaped with a few scratches, and the car was but slightly damaged. The car was soon hauled out of its perilous position, and Matijasevich is thanking his lucky stars that he managed to escape death.

DEPUTY SHERIFF JARA KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Deputy Sheriff Jules Jara was killed instantly Wednesday afternoon when an automobile skidded and turned turtle on the highway eight miles north of San Luis Obispo. Jara and another officer, Jack Kentfield, of Redwood City, were taking a handcuffed prisoner back to the county jail at Redwood City when the accident happened. The machine skidded on the wet pavement and plunged over a steep embankment, Jara being instantly killed. The other two men are in the hospital, but both will recover.

Deputy Jara and Kentfield had gone to San Luis Obispo to get James Carroll, wanted by Sheriff James J. McGrath for robbery in connection with the holdup of a taxi driver and another man near Colma three months ago.

Jules Jara was about 40 years of age and was a native of San Mateo county, being a member of one of the county's pioneer families. He was born near Half Moon Bay and in early life attended school there. He was a life long friend and school day companion of the late Sheriff T. C. McGovern, and the latter made Jara a member of his staff several years ago. He was known as a conscientious, obliging and efficent public servant, and his death came as a sad shock to a host of friends throughout the county.

The death of Deputy Sheriff Jara was the third that has occurred in the office of the San Mateo county sheriff during the last five months. It was five months ago that Sheriff Thomas C. McGovern died of a sudden heart attack. About two months ago Undersheriff Pierre Larrecou was killed in a gun battle with thugs in a Menlo Park restaurant.

FIRE COMMISSIONERS HOLD REGULAR MONTHLY SESSION

On Monday evening November 7th the Fire Commissioners held their regular meeting at the City Hall.

The meeting was called by the chairman at 8.15. The routine business was disposed of and then under the new ruling of the commissioners the secretaries of each company called the roll of their respective companies.

To enlighten the public we would state that the commissioners have decided that while the respective companies will continue to hold their meetings at their company houses, the official meeting of the entire fire department will be held the first Monday of each month at the City Hall.

After the commissioners adjourned their meeting Chief Kennedy took the chair and proceeded to tell the men what they could do to make a better department and what he expects them to do. Chief Kennedy read a paper which he had prepared.

The meeting held Monday night was one of the greatest meetings ever held by the firemen, and it is hoped that they will continue to be well attended.

It is as the Chief said, "The men can make the department a great department or they can make it otherwise. It all rests with the men."

GOOD ATTENDANCE AT GRACE CHURCH

Next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock at Grace Presbyterian church the theme will be, "Seeing Things." You will find it interesting to come to this service.

Despite all rumors and conditions of unstableness, we are still believing that clean living and Christian faith will yet win, and it is certain that we can lose nothing by it.

The attendance last Sabbath, both morning and evening, was way above the average, and a deep spiritual awakening is the great need of the hour.

Several new scholars and some new faces were seen at the services last Sabbath.

As we see day by day the children growing up and many of them without religious or moral training, we cannot help but think of that poem:

His mountains strike us dumb with awe,
His oceans strike us to the quick,
We never cease to marvel at
The clouds piled high in masses thick.

Sky, seas, and mountain. wonders are,
And chartless winds, or fierce or mild,
But still I think God's masterpiece
Is just a little child.

You will find a welcome with us, also an urge to help make the children's future bright.

CHAS. H. GATCHELL, Minister.

LOMITA PARK SEEKS AID IN IMPROVEMENT OF STREETS OF TOWN

A ptition was presented to the San Mateo county board of supervisors on Monday by property owners of Lomita Park, asking the immediate improvement of the streets of the town. The petition urged the board to inaugurate proceedings under the county improvement act of 1921 and the bond act of 1915 to pave the streets of the district with asphaltic concrete with a three and one-half inch base and a one and one-half inch surface, to lay proper sewers and laterals and install thirty-six fire hydrants. The petition was laid over for early action.

Supervisor Hickey called attention of the supervisors to the need of another traffic officer in the First township, to patrol the Bay Shore and the Skyline boulevard, and recommended that James Wallace, Jr., be named for the position. The request was unanimously granted.

The petition to close the O'Neil avenue crossing in Belmont, which has been under consideration for several months, was denied without prejudice.

County Surveyor George Kneese submitted revised maps of precincts of the county for the elections to be held next year. The number of new precincts was not tabulated, but shows a large increase over two years ago. Seven new precincts have been added to Burlnigame. The maps will be considered by the supervisors and definitely passed upon at the first meeting in December.

The $30,000 bond issue of the Ravenswood water district was ordered sold to Neale, Kelty and Supple, who submitted the only bid of par, accrued interest and a premium of $25. An audit of the books of the Justice's Court of the Third township was ordered by the board.

Fred H. Drake inquired of the board as to the present status of the proposal to conduct a scientific appraisal of the county, and was informed that the matter was being held in abeyance owing to the impossibility of providing funds from this year's tax levy to pay the cost of such an appraisal.

The city of Burlingame was granted permission to lay a water main on Hillside Drive with the provision that the street work be replaced to the satisfaction of the county engineer.

Fire Warden Bert Werder was authorized to construct a fire trail around the County Memorial Park.

A protest against the methods employed by the Kavanaugh Construction Company in handling the widening of Whipple road was filed by A. C. Finkler. Engineer Kneese explained that he had stopped the work of the contractors and it would be completed by the county.

District Attorney Swart advised that the claim of the California Development Association for membership dues in the sum of $580 was not legal and the demand was ordered returned for itemization of services rendered the county by the organization.

The matter of taking out a compensation insurance policy on employees of the county was submitted to the board by R. A. Hoppe of the state fund, and the matter was set for November 21.

ENTERTAINS FRIENDS AT BIRTHDAY DINNER PARTY

Mrs. Macky Moss entertained a group of friends at a surprise dinner at her home, 527 Evergreen avenue, on Thursday evening of last week. The affair was given in honor of Mr. Moss' birthday and was a thorough surprise to him. The table was most beautifully decorated with a centerpiece of fruit surrounded by American Beauty roses. After dinner was over each guest received one of the roses, which they found to their surprise was made on the end of a lead pencil out of crepe paper and contained a pretty maiden's face under the center petal. The guests were Miss La Verne Pan, Miss Mabel Hanson, Miss Ruth Miller, of Oakland, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sibilia and daughter Gloria.

BUILDING PERMITS

City Clerk B. C. Ross reports the issuance of the following building permits during the week:

Walter Hughes, 198 Alexander street, four rooms.

Paul B. Duerner, 401 Evergreen avenue, five rooms; 415 Evergreen avenue, five rooms.

Lindholme Building Co., 101 Acton street, store and five rooms.

Chas. P. Gibbons, 30, 32 and 34 Hillcrest Drive, four apartments and two stores.

A. Bennedetti, 6598 Mission street, two room addition.

BANK OF ITALY SEEKS DEPOSITS OF BILLION DOLLARS BY MAY, 1930

To perpetuate its pre-eminence among the greatest banks of the world, the Bank of Italy has launched a campaign to increase its deposits to one billion dollars by May 6, 1930, the sixtieth birthday of A. P. Giannini, founder of the institution.

The epochal campaign will mean the signing up of millions of customers in all walks of life throughout the nation to share in the benefits produced by the energy and virility of the great bank, and the obtaining of approximately $400,000,000 or more than $100,000,000 a year in new business.

The man selected to lead the campaign is George A. Webster, vice-president of the bank and head of its business extension department. It would not be far amiss to say that the task has been given this able young banker and his lieutenants to promote the distribution of prosperity and progress throughout California.

Webster won his spurs as a banker years ago as executive vice-president af the Liberty Bank. As head of the business extension department of the Bank of Italy a fair share of the present prestige of that institution can be traced to him.

Nothing like this tremendous campaign has ever been attempted before in the history of world finance. It has as its inspiration the genius of A. P. Giannini and the desire of the employees to express their appreciation for what he has done in creating in California one of the world's largest financial institutions.

All managers in the 284 branches of the system throughout the state were notified of the campaign by special letter. They were told that the capital structure of the bank more than justifies the increase and that the area served is mort than capable of producing the business desired.

Each branch will be required to send in weekly reports to the respective jurisdicitional offices in San Francisco and Los Angeles during the life of the campaign, and quarterly reports of the new business obtained will be circularized throughout the entire system.

An X-ray examination of a demented woman at Cambridge, Del., revealed her uncommon appetite for assorted hardware. A photograph of her stomach disclosed among its contents one teaspoon, six metal hair curlers, six safety pins, three of them open, 12 buttons, 6 wire hairpins and a door key. These together with a dose of poison self-administered made her quite sick for several hours.

Preserved food has been in use since 1804. The boys at Santiago believed that they were issued some of genuine antiques.

GROWTH

IN half a century the telephone in America has grown from a crude instrument and a length of wire to more than 18,000,000 telephones, interconnected by 61,000,000 miles of wire.

It has grown from uncertain transmission between two rooms to easy and dependable service from village to village throughout our big cities and across the continent and between this continent and Great Britain.

As an investment the telephone industry has grown from a subject of jest, when first introduced, to a $3,000,000,000 business, the property of 800,000 men and women who are confident in its stability and earning power.

It has grown from two men, the inventor and his assistant to an army of 350,000 engaged in meeting the problems of construction, maintenance and operation.

It has grown from a single sentence, barely intelligible, to a daily traffic of 73,000,000 calls, each a message of value to someone.

This growth is the measure of the people's need for personal communication and of the activity, in only half a century, in meeting that need.

TEACHES CHILDREN SAFE WAY TO WALK ON THE HIGHWAYS

Boys and girls in schools through Northern and Central California are being instructed in the fundamental principle of safe walking on roads and highways this month through the fifth poster lesson of the series issued by the public safety department of the California State Automobile Association.

Walk against traffic on the highway, not with it, is this month's message to the school children under the system of visual education in traffic safety arranged by the Automobile Association in co-operation with school authorities, in 800 cities, towns and school districts. The posters are on display in more than 10,000 class rooms, and each, displayed for a month before the children, is accompanied by a suggested talk to the children, prepared by the Association. The talk by teachers accompanying this month's poster follows:

"Is it easier to look ahead or over your shoulder?

"The answer to this problem is certainly that it is easier to look ahead. The purpose of this poster and lesson is to point out to you that it is also safer. Thousands of children in the outlying districts in our cities and towns and in the rural sections must walk on roads, paved highways and streets, where there are no sidewalks, in going to and from school.

"Those of you who live in sections where paved streets and sidewalks exist are equally concerned with the subject of this poster. Often in visiting relatives and friends in smaller towns, or on picnics and motor trips, and during your vacations, you also walk on the roads and paved highways.

The question we are discussing is the safe way to do this. You will find that in walking on the left hand side of the road you can look ahead and see all automobiles coming toward you. When you walk on the right side of the road you cannot see the automobiles without looking over your shoulder.

"Cars travel swiftly on roads and highways. Many times drivers do not see you because of a turn in the road, a hill, because of fog or because their vision has been obscured by other cars. But whatever the reason may be, unless your attention is attracted in time and you look back over your shoulder, you may be struck. Many accidents have happened in this way.

"Walking on the left side of the road—the safe way—permits you to save yourself by stepping out of danger, because you can see automobiles coming toward you by simply looking ahead."

URGES REPAIR WORK ON BAY SHORE ROAD

The San Francisco Chamber of Commerce is on record as urging that the state highway commission start repair work at once on six major highways, one of which is an important transportation artery in San Mateo county. This road is the Bay Shore highway. The early completion of the underpass at the southern limit of South San Francisco on the Bayshore highway was also urged.

Frederick H. Meyer, chairman of the bridge and highway committee, declared the existing road is in a bad state of repair and avoided by motorists because of its dangerous condition; that the industrial development of the city is retarded by lack of a proper highway; that the new road is needed to relieve traffic on the peninsula highway, but that expenditures would be useless without the co-operation of the state in paving t othe underpass south of the city.

The chamber directors also recommended the following:

Further construction of the Bay Shore highway from Broadway, Burlingame, to Fifth street, San Mateo.

Extension of the Skyline boulevard to the Santa Cruz road.

Complete rebuilding of the state highway from Sausalito to San Rafael on a more direct route, with a connecting link to Tiburon.

Relocation of certain sections of the present highway and construction of a super-highway between San Francisco bay region and Sacremento.

SCOTTISH CONCERT

The Scottish Concert program for the M. E. church is now complete and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Bennett assure us that it will be a thriller. They have been able to secure the wonderful Caledonian Club Pipe Band, which is well worth the money themselves, consisting if twenty performers. Pipe playing, small drums and large drums, in Scotch costume. Also Scotch dancing. There will be solos, duets and Harry Lauder songs by first class talent. One gentleman will also speak on Burns. The last Scotch concert that was given in the City Hall, a few years ago, was spoken of as the best entertainment that Daly City ever had, but this one will surpass it, so everybody be prepared and get their tickets for Friday, November 25. The concert will be held in the Jefferson Union high school. Admisison for adults will be 50 cents; children 25 cents. Come and enjoy a night in Bonnie Scotland.

It is said that there is a species of fish which catches birds. We may now have a proverb about "the early fish," etc.

GREETS VETERANS ON ARMISTICE DAY

Armistice day brings forth a message from Governor C. C. Young, greeting the World war veterans of California through the American Legion, and requesting a state wide observance of the day in the schools.

"I know that it is the hope of the American Legion that Armistice day may take on the characteristics which marked Independence day in the times of our fathers and grandfathers; that it may not be merely a day of sport and entertainment, but that it may everywhere be marked by widely attended patriotic exercises, which will bring home to our people an ever-strengthened realization of the blessings of liberty which they enjoy," Governor Young declared.

Joining with the Governor is State Commander Phil Dodson, of South Pasadena, in a message to the Legionnaires of California.

"We believe heartily that the spirit of America calls for the establishment of equal opportunity for all; such an opportunity that will reach to every nook and corner of the land, to the homes where children of poverty dwell, to be available there as well as in the homes where wealth and luxury abound," Commander Dodson said. "We want this opportunity of education to be the priceless boon of every child wherever he or she may be, whatever be the circumstances of birth, or conditions of living in which the child may find himself. For our country's sake, let us work to the end that all the children of America may grow into manhood and womanhood a credit to their country."

Commander Dodson paid tribute to the men and women who sacrificed their lives for their nation during the World war and asked that Armistice day be solemnly observed.

Colma News Notes

Mr. Witt, of Witts' Dairy, has purchased a fine new Kleiber delivery truck.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Bergmann, of San Francisco, were Colma visitors on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Heeringa, of Price street, recently returned from an enjoyable motor trip to Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Varni, of Market street, were visitors at the Varni home on Paris street, San Francisco, one evening last week.

Mrs. P. G. Kunze, Mrs. Robert Heeringa and Freddie Bauer motored to Niles Canyon, via the Dumbarton bridge, Thursrday of last week.

Ambrose McSweeney, county tax collector, and his assistants, were in Colma Wednesday for the convenience of local people in paying their taxes.

The up-to-date washing and greasing shop which is being built by Frank Russi on his property on Mission street near Castle street, is nearly completed and the equipment will soon be installed.

November 17 a turkey whist will be given for the benefit of Holy Angels church in the parochial hall. The committee is composed of the following: Mesdames Ida Callan, Mary Silicani, Thomas Fahey and Jerry Horkey.

Many local people attended the wedding of Miss Louise Gregoire and Mr. Raymond Grandona, in St. Maximus church, last Saturday evening, and the reception held at the home of the bride's parents in the Crocker Tract.

Armistice day is being observed in the schools of the Jefferson district by an all day holiday.

Jack Connelly and Ed. Sullivan, of San Francisco, were in town last Wednesday on business.

The Schenone boys, of Coursing Park, spent last Saturday at the home of their sister, Mrs. Irene Gianichini, in South San Francisco.

The members of El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, Native Daughters of the Golden West, are planning a Christmas tree party for the children of the members, to be held in Masonic Hall, Daly City, next month. Mrs. Freda Schade is in charge of the arrangements.

A monster turkey whist party is to be given at the Holy Angels' church hall on November 17. The committee in charge, Mrs. Ida Callan, Mrs. Mary Silicani, Mrs. Thomas Fahey and Mrs. Jerry Horkey, are making extensive preparations and expect a large crowd on this occasion.

Misses Margie and Tessie O'Connor entertained a number of their friends at a delightful party at the home of their mother, Mrs. Helena O'Connor, on Evergreen avenue, last Saturday evening. Hallowe'en colors were used in the decorations, and a three piece orchestra provided dance music until a late hour, when a delicious supper was served.

On Friday afternoon of this week the children of the Eighth grade of Jefferson grammar school enjoyed an outing at Sutro Baths and Museum, accompanied by Mr. Waub, manual training teacher. The following enjoyed the afternoon: Laura Passaglia, Grace Scramaglia, Elsie Silicani, Honorine, Arata, Marie Demigrassi, Bennie Haubrich, Harold Clark, John Tealdi, Robert Oakes, Daniel Silvestri, Manuel Tognoli, Walter Nessier and Angelo Malini.

The members of the Colma Community Center are very busy these days planning and preparing for the annual Christmas tree party which is held for all the children of the community. Each year the Center on Dunk street is appropriately decorated and a huge tree is decorated and hung with gifts for all. After an interesting program presented by the school children under the direction of Mrs. Pauline Henderson, Santa Claus makes his appearance and presents the gifts, much to the joy of the kiddies.

Mr. Isaia Belli, a pioneer resident of Colma, passed away on Tuesday after a severe illness of several weeks. He was the beloved husband of Natalin Belli and the loving father of Francis, Rose, David, Paul, Nicholas and Clara Belli. The deceased was a native of Italy and 65 years of age. The funeral, which was held from San Francisco on Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock, was attended by a host of relatives and friends of the deceased. Numerous floral offerings were sent by friends, who extend their sympathy to the family in their bereavement.

COLMA MAN VICTIM OF PECULIAR ACCIDENT

Andrew Galli, a Colma rancher, was painfully burned when he tossed a match into an innocent looking can which lay in front of him near the side of a barn. There was a sharp report and the can burst into a mass of seething flames which enveloped Galli's face and body. Several ranch hands, attracted by the explosion, rushed to Galli's aid and succeeded in beating out the flames. The injured man was taken to the South San Francisco hospital, where it was discovered that he had been seriously burned about the face and body. The can is supposed to have contained a quantity of gasoline.

SEEK RE-APPRAISAL OF LAND VALUES

The city of Burlingame is officially on record as favoring and urging the re-appraisal of county land values. A motion was passed at the last session of the Burlingame city council instructing the city attorney to prepare a resolution asking the county board of supervisors to prepare immediately for re-appraisal and to set aside in the next budget a sufficient amount of money to pay for the same. According to figures submitted to the city council, the cost would approximate $30,000.

Copies of the resolution will be sent to every city in the county, in conjunction with a request that each individual council or board of trustees either endorse it or prepare one of similar nature for the perusal of the supervisors.

FIND BODY OF YOUTH DROWNED ON HUNT

The body of Lester Hoff, 23-year-old duck hunter, of Menlo Park, who was drowned October 30 in Seal creek, near Dumbarton bridge, was found lost Monday not far from the point where he was last seen by two companions on the hunting trip. Hoff was employed by the Western Union Telegraph Company in Palo Alto, and lost his life when he waded into the creek to retrieve a duck crippled by his gun. His companions saw him begin to swim when swept from his feet, and a moment later saw him sink beneath the water. They were unable to reach him before he disappeared for the last time.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO MEN ACCUSED OF COUNTERFEITING

With the arrest of Alberto Bartalina and Dante Cosulich at South San Francisco, an alleged plot to flood the Pacific Coast with counterfeit $10 and $100 Federal Reserve notes was revealed.

The two men were arrested at their home in South San Francisco by Federal agents, who found an elaborate counterfeiting outfit.

Among the paraphernalia seized, they reported, were reducing and enlarging cameras, engraving machinery, plates and a large stock of green-and-red threaded paper.

DEATH OF BOY RESULTS IN MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

As an aftermath of the death of 3-year-old Robert Husted beneath the wheels of an automobile driven by Mrs. Howard Abbott, of 755 Miller avenue, South San Francisco, R. E. Husted, of 629 Grand avenue, South San Francisco, swore to a warrant charging manslaughter, before Judge Ellis C. Johnson. Mrs. Abbott was released on bail of $1,000. The lad was playing in front of his home when the accident occurred.

ALLOCATE FUNDS FOR COUNTY ROAD

Good news to motorists of the county comes in an announcement that the State Highway Commission has allocated funds to construct the section of the Bay Shore highway between the San Francisco county line, near Visitacion valley, and the underpass at South San Francisco. This will be of material help for San Mateo county highways, it is pointed out.

HILLSBOROUGH WOMAN MEETS DEATH IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Mrs. Josephine Newman, aged 70, prominent Hillsborough resident, was killed and three other persons, one of them an 8-year-old boy, are in a critical condition, as a result of an automobile accident last Friday, the auto plunging over a 15-foot embankment near King City.

A PREACHER'S GOOD-BYE

Probably it is an old story, but anyway it's full of logic. It is a popular story among Florida editors just now, and possibly our readers will enjoy it.

The preacher had been greatly discouraged and had sought a new field of labor. He happened to have a friend in the governor, to whom he appealed, and not in vain. He got a political job. In taking leave of his flock, he said:

"Brothers and sisters, I must say good-bye.

"I don't think God loves you, because none of you ever die.

"I don't think you love each other, because none of you ever get married.

"I don't think you love me, because you have not paid my salary.

"Your donations are moldy fruit and wormy apples—and by their fruits ye shall know them.

"I am going to a better place. I am going to be chaplain of the penitentiary.

"Where I go ye can not yet come, but I go to prepare a place for you, and may the good Lord have mercy upon you. Good-bye."

Anyway, there isn't likely to be a flood of poetry about Mr. Levine's overseas flight.

Sports Frocks in Fall-Winter Mode

Costumes Reflect Preference of Women Who Are Athletically Inclined.

If any one type of dress may be said to dominate the season's mode it must be the sports costume. It is really a glorified sports dress, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times, which comes out in all the designs, though in every material and color and in as many ways as there are individual creators of fashion on both sides of the Atlantic. Gowns for every occasion are made after the manner of the simple tailored frock or suit which was originally intended to meet as comfortably and completely as possible the requirements of athletically inclined women. Thereby the silhouette and entire architecture of dress in general have been changed. Indefinite outlines and informal composition with much formality in detail have been utterly erased. Sophisticated simplicity has taken the place of overelaboration, which the newest models have shown to be wholly unnecessary for the expression of femininity.

Ever since the sports style came to be accepted as a possible inspiration for the expression of many different types, couturiers have included it among the designs of their collections. Some have given it prominent place, others have shown but incidental examples in frocks, suits or ensembles. A few have given it their special attention and allotted to it an important place in their season's offering. Of these, J. Suzanne Talbot has had distinguished success. She adapts materials of every sort and description to the sports model, and in doing this artistically has widened the horizon of the original conception. "Sports" dress has no longer a necessary connection with athletics. It is largely a matter of material and trimming which distinguishes the gown of formal elegance when it is fashioned on the plan of the severely tailored frock for out-of-door life. This testing accomplishment is achieved with successs in the large assortment of beautiful costumes which Talbot presents. The fabrics cover an assortment from the stoutest weaves to the most delicate; from tweeds to chiffon velvet, and, in trimming, from leather strapping to gold mesh fringe. The most sober and the fantastic are done with equal finish, showing both conception and workmanship of the highest order.

Skirts Are Longer.

The latest idea in skirts is shown consistently in the Talbot designs, all of them being several inches longer than the styles of last year, and in all of the models attention is drawn to the bottom of the skirt. This, except in the most severe models is finished in some specific manner, such as with a band of contrasting material or cut in points, battlements or scallops. This treatment of the hem line is one of the features of the season in which Talbot is especially skilled, introducing it with fine distinction as to the type of gown to which it is suitable. Gowns of cloth and of velvet are made with the straight line at the bottom, and illustrate the charm of many kinds of plaiting. Few skirts of the Talbot costumes are made plain, and these only in the handsome fabrics which are sufficiently elaborate in themselves. One of her remarkable achievements is a skirt in which the box plaits are laid so as to be narrow at the top and widening toward the bottom and yet keep their shape—which has heretofore been thought to be impossible. This manipulation of fabric is one of the fine points of the season, illustrated in many chic costumes.

The combination of contrasting materials is shown in a large variety of models, particularly in the less formal tailored suits. In one that was especially smart there was a skirt of brown and beige in a rough mixture, woven in broken plaid pattern, the skirt being plaited all around, with a panel arrangement directly in front. This was attached, as usual in most of the three-piece suits, to a short bodice of beige crepe, and over this was worn a loose box coat of beige cloth, cut finger-tip length. Box plaits are a favorite of this couturier, who employs them in many different ways. In one suit the plaits of a skirt which is finished with a band of different material and darker color are stitched to release them at various lengths, two short alternating with one long line, the material matching the bottom band which is used between the plaits. A blouse bodice is made to match this, and a three-quarter blouse coat is belted with a strap of the contrasting cloth. Narrow cuff bands and one of the latest collarettes—a small scarf wound close about the throat and tied at one side—are all of the same stuff.

Velvet in the Lead.

Velvet, which is tremendously fashionable, is introduced in many of the best Talbot creations. It is shown as one part of the costume, either a blouse or coat, or is used as in trimmings. A crepe gown is made with a band of velvet at the skirt bottom, and for collar and cuffs. In another model a band of velvet is used at the bottom, with a crush belt and collar of the same, all in the shade of the gown. Both velvet and fur are added as trimming in a somewhat whimsical manner. In a one-piece gown of black crepe satin several new features are introduced. The waist line is absolutely normal, marked by a narrow belt of silver embroidery which trims also the neck and outlines each side of the opening of the bodice from neck to belt line. The sleeves end midway between elbow and wrist, and these have an edge of the embroidery, with which two pockets cut lengthwise at the sides of the skirt are also outlined. Around the bottom of this unusual frock is seen a band of black fox, which appears nowhere else. This manner of trimming with a single band of fur is shown effectively on a coat of beige velvet which is cut with a slight flare. It is fastened with buttons sewn close together down the middle front and is belted with a strap of glace kid and jeweled buckle about the waist, which is but slightly below normal. Not an atom of trimming is seen anywhere on the coat except a band of black fox fur drawn close around the neck.

Black Is Conspicuous.

Black has come out conspicuously in the latest styles for winter and is shown by Talbot in some of her handsomest models. Some of these are made with tailored formality, all of one material, or more often combined with velvet. These are more usual than gowns of velvet. An extremely smart ensemble is shown in which a blouse is made of black and white polka dot satin, the dots being as large as a silver quarter. This combined with plain black has somewhat the effect of a Pierette costume. With it is shown a toque made of the satin, with a wide upright band of black velvet. With the exception of two or three flashingly bright models the Talbot colors are quiet and rich in feeling and the designs both chic and elegant. An eccentric but altogether successful model is made with an overskirt of gold mesh woven as are the purse bags, with deep points and lacy edge, the weight of the metal holding close about the figure. Of entirely contrasting type is a frock named by its author "Nitouche," of grayish-blue woolen material in two shades, ornamented with steel buttons which are placed on the shoulder seam and at the belt line in front. The lighter blue is used for the bodice front, inserted as a vest, and beneath the edges of the inverted box plait in the middle-front of the skirt. The sleeveless jersey, which is so modish this season, is introduced in even the afternoon type of dress, which is quite charmingly illustrated in a model of black georgette crepe. The jersey of finely striped material in pink, gray and blue embroidery is made absolutely plain. It comes down to the hips and is beltless, with a wide band of the crepe around the bottom, and has long, close-fitting sleeves of crepe.

CLARABEL'S SUCCESSFUL VENTURE

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

THE early morning sun streaming in through the open window aroused Clarabel Frost to the fact that another day had begun.

"Oh, dear!" murmured Clarabel, sitting up in bed and rubbing her eyes, "it surely can't be time to get up. "But when she glanced at the small nickel clock which stood on the bedside table she saw that its hands pointed to fifteen minutes of five. "Well, here goes," she said with a sigh, and, slipping out of bed, began hurriedly to dress. A few moments later she descended the stairs to the kitchen and soon had a fire burning briskly in the old cook stove. She had begun to sing softly to herself when she was startled by a hoarse, croaking sound which came from an adjoining bedroom.

"Was that you, son?" she called in the direction from which the sound had come. Aren't you up yet?"

Another muffled sound caused her to hurry into the next room and, sure enough, there was Ezra burning up with fever and with cheeks puffed out like a chipmunk's.

"Why, Ezra Frost!" Clarabel exclaimed. "Whatever is the matter with you?"

"I don't know, mother," replied Ezra, hoarsely. "I have been sick all night, but I didn't call you because I thought I was only overtired and if I got a good night's sleep I would be all right this morning. But I guess I must have been out of my head, because the funniest things kept popping up in front of me every time I closed my eyes. I do wish you'd get me a good cold drink because my throat is simply scorched."

"I should think your throat would feel scorched, you poor dear," said Clarabel sympathetically. "You just lie still and I will get you something cooling to drink in a minute."

"But, mother" said Ezra in consternation, "you know I can't be sick, not today, at least, with that load of cauliflower to be delivered at the station at two o'clock. It is only half cut at that, and if we don't ship it today it will be a whole week before we can ship again and by that time it will begin to turn purple and we will have to sell it at a loss. And you know as well as I we need every cent. And we were sure that the cauliflower crop, if we could get it to market in prime shape, would pretty nearly bring enough to get us out of debt," and two big tears, in spite of tightly shut eyes, slid down Ezra's flushed cheeks.

Clarabel Frost was a widow and Ezra was her nineteen-year-old son who, since his father's death, had tried to take his place and shield his little mother, who was timid and not overstrong. So far he had been successful and Clarabel had been comfortable, and, in spite of her loss, happy in the protection of this big, good-natured boy of hers.

But when she saw those tears wrung from her boy's eyes as much from disappointment as the pain in his poor, swollen throat, all her motherhood was aroused and she felt herself fit to overcome any difficulty that might arise. Saying nothing to Ezra she went back to the kitchen and soon came back with a plate of cream toast and a cold drink. Poor Ezra tried to eat a bite, but found he could not swallow.

"I don't know what we can do, mother," wailed Ezra. "I am sure every man in the neighborhood will be busy today getting his own load to the station. We'll just have to let it go and get what we can out of the cauliflower next week. Where do you suppose I got the mumps anyway, and why did I have to have them this week of all times?"

Clarabel wondered herself, but she could only soothe Ezra and tell him not to worry surely something would come up to help them out of the difficulty. And after making him as comfortable as she could left him and went about her work. She started in to wash dishes, and had only nicely begun when she left them and, hurriedly drying her hands on the roller towel, grabbed the big butcher knife and ran softly out of the house, straight as an arrow she went up the little hill back of the barn to the cauliflower patch. Here she set to work with a will and soon had a big pile of neatly trimmed cauliflower heads all ready to be loaded on the big farm truck. She went to the barn, which was only a few rods below the patch, and, getting a big handled basket, proceeded to fill it with the wonderful white heads, which she carried down to the barn and piled upon the truck. She made trip after trip and soon had the required number piled high on the truck. She was very tired and there were several big red blisters on her hands, but she went calmly back to the house and set about preparing dinner as if nothing unusual had occupied her time.

"Where have you been, mother?" Ezra asked when she took him his dinner. "Your face is awfully red and you look tired out. What have you been doing?"

"Why, just busy, son," Clarabel answered. "You know I always find plenty to do. Are you feeling any better?" she asked, and proceeded to help him to eat the broth she had heated for him. The hand trembled slightly, but Ezra was feeling too ill to take further notice. After he had finished his broth his mother smoothed his pillow and patted him on the head and telling him to try and get some sleep, like a good boy, and he would soon feel better, she left him.

Now th Frosts owned both a farm truck and an old worn-out flivver, and Ezra had thought it great sport to teach his mother to run the old car, and whenever they went to town he always let her drive, but she was pretty timid and usually when they reached the outskirts of the town she would stop the car and let him drive on when traffic thickened. Today in the light of her resolve she went out to the barn, climbed upon the high seat of the truck, and after some moments spent in careful thought put her foot firmly down on the starter button. An awful roar, which caused her to shiver, followed. Clarabel was horribly afraid of any loud noise, and she had never noticed when Ezra started the truck that it made such a racket. In fact, this was the first time she ever had been in the truck. But with mouth set in a little firm line she manipulated the gears and brake and slowly the big truck began to back out of the shed. She guided it into the road, turned, and finally got it headed for the station. What an infernal machine it was, or so she thought. It was a very different proposition to handle than the light flivver. It seemed possessed to run first on one side of the road and then the other. It took every ounce of strength she had to keep the thing out of the gutters. Her arms ached, her heart pounded, but she bit her lips and kept the thing going somehow. After an hour's struggle and many amused glances from her neighbors who were all hurrying toward the station with their own produce, Clarabel finally guided the cumbersome truck alongside the track where the freight car was waiting to receive her load., and brought it to a jerky standstill.

"Why, Mrs. Frost," said the freight agent, "how comes it you are driving your truck? Where's Ezra?"

"Ezra is home sick with the mumps, Mr. Binner," Clarabel answered. And as there was no one to bring the cauliflower—why, I just had to do it myself. Shall I help you unload it?" she added with a proud lift of her chin.

"Well, I should say not," said Mr. Binner, "I should say you had done just about enough to drive that load in. I am right glad you got here, too, because without this load my car wouldn't have been near full, and I would have had to ship at a loss."

Clarabel arrived home without mishap, tired, but triumphant. She washed her flushed face, smoothed her hair and then went in to see Ezra.

"Well, son," she said, "that cauliflower is well on its way to market."

"Why, how on earth did it get there?" gasped Ezra.

"I took it," said Clarabel proudly, and then followed an account of her adventure. It would be hard to say which was the prouder, Ezra or his mother.

Savage Virtues Need of Civilized World

If we civilized people want to continue life we must find the means of retaining savage virtues, of checking the ever more rapid deterioration of the human mind and body, and of conserving instincts of loyalty to our fellow man.

The Paya Indians in their home range along the Plaintain river in Honduras are admitted savages, while the thronging inhabitants of New York, London and Paris call themselves civilized. Yet there is a stronger distillate of bad manners, selfish purposes and low intelligence on Broadway or in the Strand than in Oriole village—not to mention bodily imperfections.

Native mentality is but slightly concerned in the mechanical success of this or that type of social structure. Civilized men in a very small fraction of the course of human development have accumulated a mechanical advantage rather than an absolute superiority over uncivilized ones. Brutality is hardly a proper character of savages or even of brutes. Real people of the wilds are timid and retiring creatures, for all their sturdiness of bone and muscle. They seem to support and comfort each other in the sharp struggle for existence. In the communion of nature they regard themselves as younger brothers of all the birds and beasts and suppliants to all the imagined sources of power and excellence in an unplotted universe.

In the long run there is little doubt that civilization permits the survival of the structurally unfit, and it may even go so far as to bring about the elimination of structurally fit persons by putting upon them such burdens as those of war. The average savage belongs to a more rigorously tested seed stock than does his cultured brother, even when he falls before some disease which the latter is able to withstand.—Prof. Herbert J. Spinden in the Forum.

Snake as Security

All records for unique securities are claimed by a Detroit hotel, which spent the last week in possession of a python, whose owner had left it in lieu of room rent. The snake kept the room to himself. No maids would approach him. The hotel felt kindly toward the visitor, and worried about his diet. At last the manager obtained a rabbit and put it in the room. The next day, no bunny. Then the question came up, how many bunnies per week? But that was never settled. The check for the room rent arrived and the snake went on.

RAIN AND TEARS

It was all very well to be adventurers in good weather, but it was hard when it rained and when there was really not so much to do.

In a Corner of the Barn.

They loved their field, but when it poured they could not stay in the field, and Ada, who had started this trip in the very first place of all, felt quite responsible as to what happened.

She even felt the rain was a little bit her fault.

They played all the games they could.

Then they tried dressing up, but they missed the old trunk at home where there was such a supply of funny old clothes that had been put there from time to time for years and years.

"Do you think it will clear for tomorrow?" Ada asked.

"I wouldn't be surprised but what we're in for a spell of rainy weather,' Mr. Todd said cheerfully.

Ada didn't feel so cheerful.

"Yes, I wouldn't be surprised," he continued. "The earth needs a good soaking. It's too dry."

"If Grandma were here," Ada said, "we could play charades. She's wonderful at charades. She can always think up the words, too."

"Let's play still-pond-no-more-moving," Teddy suggested. So they played that for a while.

Still the rain kept up and now Clocky had gone to sleep in a corner of the barn and they didn't want to disturb him when he had gone off for them the night before.

They wondered how Cooky was getting on in the house and though they were hungry they didn't want to ask ahead of time for they knew how cross she would be.

At last, though, they rushed out into the rain and over to the house where Cooky was getting a delicious dinner even if she was still complaining about her missing teeth and that no one here would see her new hat save a pesky squirrel or so.

They asked Cooky if they were missed at home. But Cooky answered them:

"I should say they didn't speak of it. I guess they know when they're well off."

"What was the news at home?" Teddy asked.

"None," said Cooky. Nor had Jim and Jerry given any news from home.

"I wish I had Muvvy here, or Grandma," Crystal said. Her voice was very near tears.

"You have me, darling," Ada answered, and hugged Crystal.

But Crystal didn't seem to get much comfort out of that.

Then she began to cry. First huge tears fell down her cheeks and then the tears became smaller—or rather there were so many of them that they all ran together, hundreds of little tears down her cheeks.

Getting a Delicious Dinner.

"Dear me, dear me," said Ada. "What in the world will we do?"

"We always have ice cream when it rains at home," Crystal sobbed.

"We haven't any ice," Ada answered. "Don't you think pudding is nice?"

"The ungrateful brats," muttered Cooky.

"I wish Clocky'd wake up," Ada said.

Dinner was over, games had all been played, the rain kept up and Clocky was fast asleep in the barn. They would have to awaken Clocky. With his magic he could do anything!

Introducing the Dog

Little four-year-old Loraine's mother was entertaining a few friends one afternoon. After all had arrived Loraine went to the door and let the family dog (Parker, by name) in, and, leading him into the room where the guests were seated, said: "Come right in, Parker, and meet the ladies."

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

Stock Frauds Lead All

Of all robberies of the public, that of the fraudulent salesman of stock is the greatest, credit men have determined. Loss from stock fraud is four times the loss from burglary, grand larceny and petty theft. It leads that of forgery ten times, and trade frauds four times. At the present rate it is large enough to pay off the national debt in 20 years.

NEW WORLD'S RECORD IN ENDURANCE RUN

Fred C. Smith, noted long-distance auto driver, established a new world's endurance record by driving his car for 104 continuous hours in low gear, being handcuffed to the wheel at the start of his record-breaking trip by Chief of Police Rolla C. Prater. The photograph shows Smith after the trip.

CARE OF TIRES VERY IMPORTANT

Pressures Maintained Must Conform to Loads Carried.

In the course of tire development, tire experiments have proven that among the most important factors in the proper treatment of tires is the adjustment of the ratio between the air pressure of the tire and the load to be carried. Engineers have made long and comprehensive studies of the proper amount of air to be used with certain loads. The life of the tires is actually lengthened and the service given is improved if these observations of the engineers are regarded.

Overloading Is Fault.

Overloading is a common fault and the disregard for careful adjustment of air pressure in the tires caused all sorts of tire troubles, which are not attributable to the construction of the tire but to their use. The engineers and chemists are at work constantly improving the materials from which tires are made and the machinery for their production but all of the principles back of the construction of the tire are based on maintaining an air pressure commensurate with the load to be carried and the design of the tire.

If the loads are increased the air pressure must be made to conform otherwise there is an insufficient amount of air in the tires for the load carried and this produces unnatural inflation which causes an unnatural wear on the tires. If the load is too light for the air pressure carried there is not the resiliency or buoyancy to the tires that there should be. This is particularly true of balloon tires in which the variation of the air pressure is a matter to be most carefully attended.

Engine Improves.

Tires like the motor of the automobile respond to good treatment and the good motorist is the one who will heed the best advice as to the care of the engine. He will use his automobile for years and the engine will actually improve in his hands while in the hands of the poor motorist the engine will develop a multitude of troubles. So it is with tires. Proper care actually will give maximum mileage. Considering that the tires carry the load of the car and the contents, as well as protecting the whole mechanism of the car against the road blows, there are no more important elements in the operation of the car than proper tire adjustment, inflation and load.

Denatured Alcohol as Anti-Freeze Solution

Denatured alcohol is best to use in the radiator when the temperature gets down to the freezing point, the amount depending on the climate in which the car is operated. The use of powerful chemicals, while sometimes cheaper in first cost, is very likely to cause damage later, costing more in repair bills than the amount saved, as they attack the metal system and rubber hose connections. In order to guard against loss of solution make sure that all water connections are tight before adding alcohol. If the above precautions are followed there will be no danger of freezing to a car that is used regularly. However, if a car is to be laid up the cooling system should be drained.

Fix Rope for Towing

No one cares to think much about being towed home, but not to make a bad matter worse, some thought should be given to this subject. In attaching the rope which is to be used in the towing, many drivers fasten it to the axle, which is wrong. The rope should be fastened to one of the front portions of the frame, so that the pull comes on the chassis. The same thing applies to the car doing the towing, except that the rope should be fastened to some part of the rear frame.

Courtesy on Road a Joy to Touring Nowadays

One of the big pleasures of modern motoring lies in the fact that whether the trip is for 100 miles or 1,000 the motorist has every reason to feel sure that he will finish his journey without having to climb out of his car to undertake the disagreeable job of making repairs on the road.

But now and then some mishap occurs, and a courtesy of the road that all motorists can extend with little inconvenience to themselves is an offer of help to a fellow motorist whose car has become stranded. Such an offer is particularly timely if the scene of the mishap is some point whose remoteness from a garage would make it difficult to get assistance.

Even the most careful owners are caught unawares at times and find themselves far from home and minus some tool that is essential to making a repair. For instance not so long ago a man who prides himself on his equipment got a puncture on a lonely country road.

He felt he had no cause for worry, for locked on the back of his car were two new tires ready for such an emergency. But when he went to get one of these tires he could not find the key to the lock. He was just getting ready to wreck the lock when a car drew up with an offer of assistance. It happened that the good Samaritan had a key that opened the lock, and put an end to the difficulty.

Simple Holder for Hats Convenient at Any Time

fastened to the top after a long slit has been cut down the center. There should be just enough tension to hold the hat in place without crushing. If desired, the hat holder can be stretched crosswise instead of lengthwise and two or more strips used instead of one, or it can be located on a side panel instead of the top.—Popular Science Monthly.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

General good weather throughout California during November, with only a few depressions that will result in showers that will increase in volume toward the Pacific Northwest, is the month's weather prediction issued last week by Father Ricard, "Padre of the Rains" at Santa Clara.

Publication of California's new laws, passed at the 1927 session of the Legislature, has been completed, and the edition of 3,000 volumes was last week being delivered to Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan for public sale, it was announced by State Printer Carroll H. Smith. All legislation for 1927 is set forth in each volume, it was announced, the new statute book totaling 2,525 pages, which contain 85 resolutions and 898 chaptered laws. The law-books will be sold at $5 a copy by the Secretary of State.

Steps to obtain a full and accurate tabulation of all California highway accidents, and thus provide a basis for study of the causes of automobile mishaps and means of reducing their number, were announced last week by Frank G. Snook, chief of the state division of motor vehicle accidents. All county traffic squad captains under the proposed plan will be required to report the details of every motor vehicle mishap to the State division.

Asserting that the scenic value of California highways must be protected, Bert B. Meek, State director of public works, announced last week that action is being withheld on applications by oil producing interests to cut through the walls of Ventura highway parapet in approaching State tidal lands where oil drilling is proposed. Meek pointed out the State has spent approximately $500,000 on the parapet which provides a view of the ocean attracting visitors from all over the world.

Premiums paid on workmen's compensation insurance in California during the last twelve years total $148,680,244.61 and during the same period insurance carriers paid $80,037,361.93 to injured workers and their dependents, it was announced last week by John A. McGilvray, director of the State department of industrial relations.

That Trinity County is one of the best regions in the state for deer hunters is shown by the records of last season just compiled in the office of the Trinity National Forest. Hunters registered last season at the various gateways to the forest numbered 3,631. An even 1,000 came into the forest and county at the Tower House entrance, twenty miles northwest of Redding.

California's state fish exchange has no right to fix the price of fish caught in Mexican waters or beyond the three-mile limit of the coast line, Judge Andrews ruled last week in superior court in San Diego in granting an injunction sought by 100 deep-sea fishermen of San Diego port against the state marketing officials. The court overruled a demurrer of the attorney general's office to plaintiff's cause of action in so far as it would affect jurisdiction of the state on fish caught in foreign waters or from the high seas, and sustained it as applying to fish caught within the three-mile limit.

California is winning the long battle against tuberculosis, it was revealed last week when the State Department of Public Health announced that the "white plague" death rate has been cut almost in half during the last two decades. A comprehensive survey of death statistics shows that the tuberculosis mortality rate in this State was only 140.4 per hundred thousand population during the last year as compared with 221.8 per hundred thousand in 1906.

Big Oak Flat, Tioga and Wawona mountain roads into the Yosemite valley are considered closed for the season it was announced last. Snow had been falling for two days above the 7500-foot elevation. Waterfalls were up to their midspring form and many visitors are entering over the All-year highway from Merced to view the valley. The road is reported in excellent condition.

California leads all the states in the war against crime, declared Richard Washburn Child recently in an address opening the conference of the national crime commission at Washington, of which he is chairman. Missouri, he declared was at the bottom of the list, its "stubborn legislature" having considered its duty done by making it a crime to steal a dog. "In mere bulk of legislation affecting the criminal code, California also easily leads with a record of 283 bills introduced and 86 passed. However, the number passed was largely due to the revision of the criminal code and the work of its standing committee.

The attractions of California make permanent residents out of approximately 40 per cent of the automobile tourists who visit the State each year. This estimate was announced recently by Frank G. Snook, chief of the state division of motor vehicles, on the basis of a check of automobile licenses issued over a number of years. Out of 70,000 temporary permits issued out of State tourists last year, said the announcement, 28,000 were changed into permanent vehicle registrations at the request of motorists desiring to make their homes in California.

It is reported that a very fine chute of ore has been discovered on the 1,200-foot level of the Original Mine at Clearinghouse, Mariposa County. Development work is going ahead at the mine on several levels, in most of which excellent ore has been developed. Capitalists have been at the Original recently trying to negotiate for its purchase, but is said the mine is not for sale.

Following a conference between Governor C. C. Young and State Railroad Commissioner William J. Carr, it was announced last week at the executive offices that the governor has urged his newly appointed Commission on Gas Resources to begin action at once in seeking to reduce the wastage of natural gas in California oil fields.

The state departmenet of public works, in line with the new prison camp financing program sponsored by Governor C. C. Young's administration, will have 800 convicts working at wages on California highways by next spring. This was announced last week by Bert B. Meek, state director of public works, who also revealed plans for establishment of a new prison camp next year in the Monterey territory on the Carmel-San Simeon route.

The illegal employment of children in California, if any, will be thoroughly investigated within the next week or so, declared John A. McGilvray, state director of industrial relations. He said: "William A. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has stated that child labor has increased approximately 10 per cent in the San Francisco area within the past two years and has increased all over California.

To spread the gospel of conservation and reforestation, California's state government soon will go into the business of "making two trees grow where one grew before." A great state forest of more than 8000 acres, in the virgin hills of Shasta county, now is being plotted for the demonstration and probably will come under state ownership by act of the nevt legislature. California's present stand of timber totals 208,325,000,000 board feet, or some 16,200,000 acres, Pratt said, but more than 7,600,000 acres already have been cut over. In the cut-over areas, Pratt estimates, there are 5,700,000 acres which will reforest naturally if given proper fire protection, but on the remaining 1,900,000 acres artificial reforestation must be undertaken.

Led by the California State Automobile Association, a million motorists in 927 automobile clubs in 11 western States will fight for elimination of the federal excise tax on motor cars. This announcement was made by President Burton T. Towne of the California State Association. "We will fight every step of the way to eliminate this tax," Burton said. "Last year $66,437,861 was collected from auto owners in a tax purely a war measure. Similar taxes have been eliminated on many other lines. We are urging clubs in the west to secure support of their congressmen in the fight to eliminate this tax.

The prediction that California will send a solid delegation to the next Republican national convention instructed for Secretary Hoover was made last week by Senator Shortridge, Republican, California, upon his return to Washington. "Inasmuch as President Coolidge will not be a candidate," he said "California will send a solid delegation for Herbert Hoover for President.

Figures compiled by the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks showing marked gains in banking resources in the last eight years and indicating "the growing confidence of the people of the United States in State banking systems," were made public last week by Will C. Wood, State superintendent of banks. Resources of State banks, Wood said, have grown from $25,965,000,000 on June 30, 1919, to $40,046,661,000 on June 30, 1927. "The confidence of the people of California in State banking institutions is not misplaced," Wood declared. "The bank act which governs the State banks of California affords exceptional legal safeguards for saving deposits. From July 1, 1913, to June 30, 1927, no savings depositor in the savings departments of California State banks sustained a loss. It is a remarkable record."

The Wrigley Corporation, chewing gum and confectionery manufacturing company organized under the laws of Delaware, last week filed papers with the Secretary of State at Sacramento seeking a charter to do business in California with headquarters in Los Angeles. Capital stock of the Wrigley Corporation was given as 2,000,000 shares without par value.

Several carloads of the 1928 California motor vehicle registration plates— blue background with letters and numerals in gold—are being received by the State motor vehicle department in preparation for the issuance of new plates more than two months hence. It is estimated that nearly two million pairs of plates will be required before the end of 1928.

RADIO

Audio-Amplifier Tubes for Best Reproduction

Why are large audio-amplifier tubes of the 112, 171 and 210 types essential for quality reproduction? This question can be answered, briefly, as follows:

Older types of radio receivers reproduced with full intensity only the medium-pitched notes, to which both the loud speaker and the human ear are sensitive. The lower bass notes were not reproduced and the high frequencies were slighted. Under such conditions, tubes of the 201A type were capable of giving satisfactory service.

Present-day requirements call for full reproduction of a much wider range of frequencies with uniform intensity. The high frequencies do not carry much energy, and hence impose no additional load on the tube supplying the speaker. The low frequencies, on the other hand, contain most of the energy present in musical selections or speech and, therefore, have a tendency to greatly overload the tubes. At the same time, the reproduction of these notes does not give the impression of loudness, because the ear is less sensitive to them.

It will be evident, therefore, that quality reproduction requires tubes capable of furnishing greater power output than can be obtained from 201A type and similar tubes. Emphasis should be placed on this feature of tone quality in reproduction, and not on the volume obtainable from power tubes.—Radio News.

Emergency Tube Repair When the Filament Sags

It sometimes happens that the grid of a vacuum tube touches the filament or, if the vacuum tube is mounted horizontally, the filament may sag on the grid. When this occurs, some remedy is necessary, for the set will not operate with the audions in that condition. If the grid has not stuck to the filament it can be jarred away by rapping the tube on the palm of the hand. At times, however, this is not sufficient. If it is not certain whether the grid and filament are touching, or something else may be wrong, this can be easily determined by connecting two volts from one cell of the storage battery across one of the filament contact pins and the grid contact pin. If one-half the filament lights this is a proof that they are touching. Do not apply the full voltage, for that might burn out the filament with only one-half of it offering resistance in the circuit. If the grid and filament are stuck together, connect both filament terminals together and put two volts across the grid and filament connections. Then, while the filament is dimly lighted, strike the tube gently on the palm of the hand. This will cause the grid to become disengaged. Then it can be jarred back into its place.

Working Out Designs on Panel of Receiving Set

The panel of a receiving set can be improved by working out a design with a sharp knife and ruler. With these articles, cut parallel lines in the form of a border around the panel. At the corners take a compass and scratch arcs of circles intersecting each other and joining the ends of the parallel lines. The effect is most pleasing and it adds materially to the general appearance of the panel. In fact, if the work is done well the set will look better than the average manufactured outfit. There are numerous other designs which anyone with a little artistic ability will be able to scratch upon the panel. Keep the knife sharp and hold the ruler firm, first marking out the pattern in pencil. A glass-cutting knife is ideal for this work, but care should be exercised not to bear too heavily upon it.

When Saturation Point in Radio Is Reached

There is a saturation point in radio, but it has nothing to do with radio sales or the use of radio equipment. The reference is in terms of the operation of the set.

Perhaps many radioists with new "B" eliminators have tried hooking up the amplifier tube to the highest voltage terminal on the device simply with the idea of finding out what would happen under those circumstances. That is when the saturation point is found. If the plate current is too excessive, variations in the grid potential do not affect it. At best there would be distorted reception.

Radio Displaces Wire Phone Lines in Colombia

For communication between oil-pumping stations in Colombia, South America, engineers are installing a radio-telephone system, to replace the wire lines which frequently are thrown out of commission by falling trees during storms, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Contact among stations is necessary, for, if a valve at one pumping point is closed without informing the next station, a burst pipe and probably expensive delays will follow.

There are nine stations in the chain, all about 45 miles apart.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinski of 526 1st Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grand-children, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty, say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

Town 1,300 Years Old

The thirteen hundredth anniversary of the church and town of Dewsbury, Yorkshire, England, has been celebrated by special services in the parish church and a historical pageant. There is a local tradition that Paulinus visited Dewsbury in the year 627, the same year that he baptized King Edin. The archbishop of York said recently, in referring to the tradition: "I dare to give it the force of history."

LINDY'S LONG FLIGHT

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh recently ended his long air tour in the interest of aviation, returning to New York after having flown more than 25,000 miles since July.

During the tour he visited more than eighty cities and made speeches in behalf of airways, airports and other matters pertaining to the advancement of aviation. The schedule laid out at the beginning of the tour was closely followed and no mishap marred the progress of his triumphal flight.

In spite of the exactions of the tour, Lindbergh declared, "I never felt better in my life," but added, "I feel that I have earned the right to drop out of the public view for a while."

He told reporters that he had made no definite plans for the future, but in answer to questions stated positively some things he will not do. He will not run for Congress, nor take a government position. It is well known that he will not go into the movies or otherwise exploit his fame as the world's most popular hero of the day.

And no popular hero of any day has ever kept his head quite so well as Lindbergh.

TO OUST LAME DUCKS

Another effort will be made at the coming session of Congress to change the meeting dates of that body, so that members elected in November would enter upon their duties on the first Wednesday of the following January, instead of thirteen months after election, as at present.

There are several logical reasons for the change. It would do away with the participation in legislation by members who had been defeated, the so-called "lame ducks;" it would obviate the necessity of adjourning the short sessions on March 4, as the present law provides; it would give new members the opportunity to serve in two sesisons before going into a campaign for re-election.

The new plan, of which Senator Norris of Nebraska is the author, also provides for the inauguration of the President of the United States on the first Monday in January, instead of March 4. A resolution for submitting these changes to the states in the form of a constitutional amendment has passed the Senate three times, but has never been acted upon in the House, although there appears to be little opposition to in in that body.

Should it be possible to get the measure to a vote in both houses, it is likely that it would be approved by Congress and ratified by the states, thus paving the way for the elimination of the objectionable short term, with its "lame duck" members.

HONORING A MOTHER

As a graceful tribute to a pioneer Southern mother, a great new hydro-electric dam on the Coosa river in Alabama will be dedicated on November 21 and named Jordan Dam, in honor of Elmira Sophia Jordan, the daughter of a veteran of the War of 1812.

Miss Jordan became the wife of Dr. William M. A. Mitchell, and it is through the prominence of their two sons in the electrical industry that this honor is to be done to her memory.

These sons are Colonel R. A. Mitchell, senior vice-president of the Alabama Power Company, and S. Z. Mitchell, a director of the same company and chairman of the board of the Electric Bond and Share Company.

The new dam has been built by the Alabama Power Company as another unit of its rapidly growing system, in the developement of which the two sons have had an active part.

It is highly appropriate, therefore, that the name of Elmira Sophia Jordan should be perpetuated through this great dam, which will serve the community in which she wrought most nobly for many years.

THE BALLOT OF DEATH

Four ballots in an urn, three white and one black. Four men to draw them out, the three drawing white ballots to go free, the one drawing the black ballot to die. Strangely enough the first three to draw secured the white ballots, leaving the fourth to draw the fatal black slip.

This was the dramatic scene enacted at La Paz, Bolivia, a few days ago, and came about in this way. Four men were convicted of the murder of former President Pando. Under the Bolivian law, only one person can be executed for a single murder, no matter how many may be implicated. So, to determine which of the four should pay the penalty, the drawing was held at the Palace of Justice.

Alfredo Jauregui, aged 28, who had already spent ten years in prison, was the unfortunate player in the lottery of death. He laughed when his fate was known and declared his innocence, but refused to ask for mercy. At the time of his execution he declared his innocence, and asserted that an innocent man was being murdered.

Guilty or not, some admiration is due a man who can play such a grim game and lose with a smile.

NOTED WOMAN VETERAN

In the selection of Mrs. Irene McIntyre Walbridge of New Hampshire as the new national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, a deserved honor has been paid to one of the outstanding women workers of the world war.

She was born in Kingston, Ontario, in 1891, and spent her early years in Labrador, where her father was a Salvation Army welfare worker. She is a graduate of Mount Holyoke College and a patriotic lecturer of note.

As a member of the Salvation Army she served on four fronts during the war, dispensing cheer and comfort to soldiers of the allied armies, often under the most trying conditions. Since the war she has been particularly active in Auxiliary circles and became president of the New Hampshire department, giving generously of her time in the interest of ex-service men.

In Mrs. Walbridge the Legion Auxiliary has a most worthy and capable head, under whose administration this important adjunct of the American Legion will doubtless render an increased measure of useful service.

FROM FIRE TO GAS

The date of the discovery of fire is unknown. But it was many thousands of years ago, when some primitive man found that he could produce a flash and with it set fire to various substances. It was years after that before it was generally understood that this newly discovered agent was valuable for keeping caves warm, and furnished light, and, most important, for cooking meat, wild fruits and vegetables.

Something had been discovered that marked a turning point. And for ages following, it was the greatest single factor for progress. But from the Stone Age to barely over a century ago no great improvement was made in the use of fire.

However, as far back as 1658, English scientists had noticed, with varying degrees of interest, peculiar and apparent inexplicable streams of inflammable air that issued from the mouths of mines in the coal district. And then in 1792, William Murdoch constructed apparatus by which gas was distilled from coal and used to light his home and offices in Redruth. Another great turning point had come in the world. From then on the evolution of fire continued, until today manufactured as well as natural gas, wherever obtainable, is becoming the accepted fuel in homes and industrial plants, because of efficency and economy.

CAVALRY ON WHEELS

Cavalry of the future may be speeded toward the battle front on wheels, if methods employed in a recent experiment secure general adoption.

Horses, men and field equipment of Troop F, Fifth Cavarly, were transported in motor trucks from Marfia to Fort Clark, Texas, a distance of 300 miles, in 36 hours. The troop was completely horsed and equipped for instant service at all times during the trip.

Inasmuch as cavalrymen usually fight on foot in modern warfare, it seems that where passable roads are available for trucks the horses would be so much useless baggage, although there might occasionally arise a condition which would make their transportation by truck desirable.

Doubtless it would make an old-time cavalryman smile, however, to see a bunch of horses bundled into motor trucks when "boots and saddles" sounds.

"Abie's Irish Rose" has closed its run on Broadway after five years, thus verifying the judgment of early critics who declared that it was a poor show and couldn't last.

Mr. Lowden suggests a "mixed commission" to work out Mississippi flood control plans. The plans appear to be pretty well mixed already.

BANKER CONVINCED

The experience of a small city banker in an Eastern state, related by M. E. McCleish at a recent business men's convention in Chicago, should be of interest, not only to bankers, but to all who have goods or service to sell.

Two years ago the banker in question was discouraged because of a falling off of business. One of his associates suggested an advertising campaign for the purpose of stimulating thrift in the community, which he believed would be reflected in increased deposits.

The banker was skeptical and declared that even if he did advertise he would only take business from the other bank of the town, so that the community as a whole would gain nothing. Persuaded to advertise, however, he was surprised by the results.

Within a year his own business was increased by $375,000, while his neighbor banker had a gain of $147,000 during the same period.

Advertising had aroused the community to a realization of the importance of thrift, and savings were brought out of hiding places to be added to the capital of the town, with consequent benefits all around, even to the banker's non-advertising competitor.

SUMMONS

In the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of San Mateo.

J. L. Smith, Plaintiff, vs. All Persons claiming any interest in, or lien upon, the real property herein described, or any part thereof, Defendants.

Action No. 13524.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA:

To all persons claiming any interest in, or lien upon, the real property herein described or any part thereof, defendants, greeting:

You are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint of J. L. Smith, plaintiff, filed with the Clerk of the above entitled Court and County, within three months after the first publication of this summons, and to set forth what interest or lien, if any, you have in or upon that certain real property or any part thereof, situate in the County of San Mateo, State of California, particularly described as follows:

Lots 8, 9 and 54 and 55 in Block 2; Lots 5 and 7 in Block 3; Lot 16 in Block 4; Lots 4 and 5 in Block 6; Lots 18, 19, 39, 40 and 62 in Block 7; Lot 1 in Block 11; Lots 25 and 26 in Block 12; Lots 7, 8, 34, 38, 39, 47 and 82 in Block 14; Lots 11, 19 and 21 and 22 in Block 15; Lots 5, 6, 7, 8, 15 and 16 and 26 in Block 16; Lots 22 and 23 in Block 21; Lots 13, 30 and 31 in Block 22; Lots 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 17, 18 and 19 in Block 23; Lot 14 in Block 24; Lots 2, 3, 4 and 5 in Block 25; Lots 1, 2, 9, 15, 16, 17 and 18 in Block 27; Lots 1, 2 and 3 in Block 28; Lots 1, 28, 29 and 37 in Block 29; Lots 36, 37 and 42 in Block 30; Lots 23, 24, 25, 26 and 35 in Block 31; Lots 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 22, 23 and 24 in Block 32; Lots 17, 21, 22 and 23 in Block 33; Lots 16, 17, 18 and 42 in Block 34; Lots 2, 30, 31 and 36 in Block 35; Lots 5 and 6 in Block 36; Lots 5, 11, 12, 13, 33, 34, 35 and 36 in Block 38; Lots 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 41, 42, 43, 44 and 45 in Block 39; Lots 2, 5, 6, 13, 16 and 17 in Block 40; Lot 39 in Block 42; Lots 9, 10, 16, 17, 26, 27 and 32 in Block 43; Lots 3, 18, 19, 20 and 30 in Block 44; Lot 18 in Block 45; Lots 6, 15, 16 and 17 in Block 46; Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 28, 41, 42, 50 and 56 in Block 47; Lots 9, 10, 11, 12, 18, 19, 49 and 50 in Block 48; Lots 14 and 15 in Block 49; Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 39, 40, 41, 42 and 61 in Block 50; Lots 4, 17, 18, 46, 50 and 51 in Block 51; Lots 3, 24, 34, 43, 44 and 45 in Block 53; Lots 14, 15, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 52 and 53 in Block 55; Lots 10, 11, 12, 17, 18 and 21 in Block 54; Lots 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17 in Block 56; Lots 11, 26 and 27 in Block 57; Lots 7, 21 and 22 in Block 58; Lots 15, 16, 17, 18 and 19 in Block 59; Lots 58, 59, 76 and 77 in Block 61; Lots 28, 50, 55, 56 and 57 in Block 62.

Which said lots and blocks are laid down and delineated upon those three certain maps entitled:

1. "Map of Redwood Park, Subdivision No. 1, San Mateo County, California", filed October 18, 1908, in Liber 6 of Maps at page 46, San Mateo County Records.

2. "Map of Redwood Park, Subdivision No. 2, San Mateo County, California", filed December 7, 1908, in Liber 6 of Maps at page 49, San Mateo County Records.

3. "Map of Redwood Park, Subdivision No. 3 and Resubdivision of Blocks 6, 7 and 14 of Subdivision No. 1, San Mateo County, California", filed December 12, 1908, in Liber 6 of Maps at page 52, San Mateo County Records.

And you are hereby notified that, unless you so appear and answer, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint, to-wit: That it be adjudged that the plaintiff is the owner of said property in fee simple as absolute; that his title to said property be established and quieted; that the Court ascertain and determine all estates, rights, titles, interests and claims in and to said property, and every part thereof, whether the same be legal or equitable, present or future, vested or contingent, and whether the same consists of mortgages or liens of any description; that plaintiff recover his costs herein and have such other and further relief as may be meet in the premises.

WITNESS my hand and the seal of said Court this 10th day of September, A. D. 1927.

(SEAL.)
ELIZABETH M. KNEESE, Clerk.
By R. G. Winter, Deputy Clerk.
J. L. Smith, Attorney for Plaintiff.

—19—

We went downstairs and out of the house in silence, and as we moved down the path we were instantly challenged by Mallory, who came running up to us.

"Where's Wilkins," he asked. "What have you done with him?"

"Lost him," said Ashton sourly.

"But he can't have got out of the house," protested Mallory. "I'm sure nobody has got out of the house."

"We've lost him, I tell you," said Ashton. "Can't you understand plain English?"

We all halted just then, and started, a little expectant. A man's footsteps were approaching, and the next moment he halted, rather undecisively, at the front gate. But seeing us, he turned in and came promptly toward us.

"Where's the car, gentleman?" he asked. "What have you done with the car?"

"What's that!" Ashton roared.

"The car—the automobile that I drove you out in! Where is it?"

For a moment there was no answer to that but silence. But the silence and the dismayed astonishment on our faces, gave the man his answer.

"So you went to the fire, did you?" said the doctor grimly.

"Not for more than five minutes," the man protested. "I thought I'd see if I could be of any help—"

The man's explanation trailed off volubly—protesting, incoherent, but we paid very little attention to it. We knew what had happened, all too well.

"Well," said the doctor, "if Wilkins only appreciated the fact, he owes us a large debt of gratitude. We told him about the map; and then we brought the girl out to him, and left her, together with an automobile for him to disappear in."

"He's better not try to thank me," said Ashton grimly, "until the score is settled. I'll get him yet."

"No," said the doctor, "I don't believe you will. Wilkins is playing in luck, perfectly unmerited good luck. And when you combine luck with the more solid and reliable qualities which Wilkins possesses, you get a result that is almost sure to be successful."

Ashton turned away impatiently.

"But the car!" the chauffeur cried. "I'm responsible for it. What am I to do?"

Ashton told him what he might do, in three or four short, explosive words.

CHAPTER XI

The doctor's prediction regarding the escape of Wilkins and the girl came true. It was all of twenty-four hours before the wires were working again; and the search, which could not fairly begin until that time, proved absolutely futile. The automobile was found next day, very early in the morning, standing in front of the Western station, the very place where we had started in it on our ride to Oak Ridge. But the oddly assorted pair, who must have driven back to town in it that night, disappeared as completely as if the earth had swallowed them up.

It was a long while before Ashton would admit the probability, or even the possibility, that he had lost them. Their escape must have rankled, for he never, voluntarily, spoke of the Oak Ridge affair, and he treated all reference to it, however indirect, in a manner which did not encourage discussion.

I think that, in his heart, Doctor McAlister found it impossible to be sorry that Wilkins had got off. It is one thing to know, as a matter of fact, that a man is a knave and that he richly deserves to be hung; but it is another thing to wish, devoutly, for such a consummation. We had liked Wilkins, and the strange, uncanny revelations regarding his past, which the doctor's merciless instruments had betrayed to us, were not strong enough to change that liking.

What we regretted most, in our discussions over the affair, was our fragmentary knowledge of it. One thing certain about it all seemed to be that we should never know.

But in that conclusion, strangely enough we were wrong. Only a few days ago (and it is now more than two years since the events I have here chronicled took place) the doctor came into my office waving a letter.

"Look at the handwriting first," he said, "and see if you can guess who it's from."

I took the thing in my hand, and frowned over it for a moment in complete perplexity. It was familiar, almost as familiar as my own, and yet I could not place it.

But as I gazed, some vague suggestion of delicate French potages and entrees came into my mind. I started, and dropped the letter on my desk.

"Not—not Wilkins!" I cried.

The doctor smiled broadly. "Read what he's got to say."

I needed no second invitation "Doctor McAlister.

"Respected Sir: I have long intended to write to you to tell you how Jane Perkins and I are getting along, thinking you might be interested. I have taken up the white man's burden, as the poet says, and I find that it takes up most of my time, even though this island of mine is small (About ten square miles) and the population not numerous.

"Perkins and I (or Fanenna as she is called by her own people) are married and living very happy. Now that I am, in a sort, king here—trusting that you will pardon the liberty, sir—and obliged to make all the laws as well as enforce them, I am filled with regret for my former irregularities, though I may say that they have turned out well in the end.

"I did not murder Henry Morgan. Fanenna did, although she does not know it, and I would not tell her so for worlds. Perhaps I had better tell my story in order.

"Morgan was a villain and he deserved exactly what he got—if I may be allowed that opinion, sir. Circumstances may have justified him in killing Captain Franklin; indeed, there is no doubt that it had to be one or the other of them; and in robbing him of his money and his map, he only did what others, perhaps, would have done in his place. But he did an inexcusable thing, when he lodged an information with the authorities against the rest of us. The act was not necessary to his escape, for he could have got off scotfree anyway. But he wanted Franklin's treasure all to himself, and he thought if he could get us all hanged there would be none to dispute it with him. I found out in time what he had done, and I escaped; but the other poor fellows were caught and paid the penalty of their faith in a traitor.

"I went to America, but not in pursuit of Morgan. I did not know that he had gone there, and I wanted nothing more to do with him anyway, as I had decided to settle down and lead a respectable life. It pays just as well as the other and it's much more comfortable. This may surprise you, but it's true—I do not refer to the tips I earned as head waiter at The Meredith. That was not my trade so much as it was my recreation. In my youth I made the acquaintance of a palm reader and spiritualist, and this was the profession I took upon coming to your city. It was not long before I was able to organize this industry and to hire others to do the actual work. I supervised it all, and as head waiter at The Meredith, I was able to learn much about our smart people, which could be told to them again by palmists and mediums, with very good effect.

"It was in this connection that I became acquainted with Jane Perkins. A medium I employed, whose apartment was not far from The Meredith, discovered her, and was using her trance states very effectively as a control. I got the greatest surprise of my life the first time I ever heard her talking Maori, a language which I understand and speak, as I suspect that you do also. From her talk I discovered that she was my old captain's daughter, and that she had inherited his secret. This was coming rather too close to home for comfort, as you will well understand, so I took her out of the spiritualist business, much as I regretted to do so, for she was very valuable, and got her employed as chambermaid at The Meredith.

"We were out walking together one day when her subjective state came over her without warning. She darted ahead of me, and I saw that she was tracking some one through the streets, by the scent. I followed her. Luckily it was dark, and we were not molested. She traveled very fast and overtook the person she was following, just as he was entering the Western station. I caught one look at him and saw that he was Henry Morgan.

"I succeeded in rousing her out of her state, for I did not want anything to happen just then and there. But I was determined to find where he lived and to get his map away from him. It did him no good, as there was neither latitude and longitude marked upon it, and this was the secret which Fanenna had told me.

"On the night when the unfortunate incident occurred which caused you and Mr. Ashton to interest yourselves in the case, we had gone out to Oak Ridge to make an attempt to secure the map. Nothing more than that, I assure you, sir. I had hypnotized her in order that she might lead me, by means of her extraordinary sense of smell, to the house where he lived, but she ran on ahead too fast for me to follow her. The crime was already committed, if you can call it a crime, before I reached the house.

"I tried to get her to go home with me, making no attempt to find the map at that time, but she was greatly excited and dangerous. So I was obliged to go away without her. I was unable to find her from that time, until she came back to The Meredith of her own accord, the day after she made her second visit to the Morgan house at the time when you were there.

"It was during my absence from the hotel, and without my knowledge, that she answered the advertisement for the cloak, indeed, I did not know that she had done so, until you spoke to me concerning it that night at dinner. At that time it seemed safer to permit you to make the examination which you wished to make, than to try to prevent the examination from taking place, for she was now Jane Perkins, perfectly ignorant of everything connected with the affair.

"How you found out her true connection with it, as well as mine, I have no idea. I did not know you had done so, until I tore open the envelope in the hall and found it empty. Then I knew that it was time to act.

"There is one thing more, before I close, which you may think wants an explanation. I said just now that Fanenna did not know that she had killed old Morgan, and yet she is Fanenna rather than Jane Perkins, although she is not exactly either one of them. She is no longer subject to those trance states of hers, and her character seems to be a mixture of the two distinct persons which she was before that night when you took her out to Oak Ridge with you. Her memories of all her past are, I am thankful to say, extremely vague, though she remembers some things out of both of them. She can talk both Maori and English as well as I, and she says it is because when she was a Maori girl she heard a voice speaking to her in English, and ordering her to understand it. This seems great nonsense to me, but it may be that you will see some meaning in it.

"I will close by saying that the map which I found in old Morgan's house that night was worth all the trouble it cost me to get it, for it has made us very comfortable and well-to-do, and has made it possible for me to make many improvements on this island of mine. It is a very beautiful place, and with the comforts of civilization, which I have been able to add to its natural attractions, is a very good place to live.

"Fanenna wishes to be remembered to you and Mr. Phelps, and also to Mr. Ashton, whom she used to admire very greatly when she was chambermaid at The Meredith.

"I should enjoy a visit from you very much, but I fear it will be impossible, for reasons which you will doubtless understand, for me even to suggest such a thing. But please believe me, sir,

"Yours most gratefully and respectfully,

"WILKINS,
"Rona Island.

"P. S. You have seen a map of this island, or a part of it, and above is the name I have given it; but I must imitate the wisdom and discretion of my old chief, and omit to mention latitude and longitude."

The doctor met my eye as I laid the paper down. "You don't happen to know the latitude and longitude, do you, Phelps?" he asked, laughing.

"Do you?" I exclaimed, with a rather startled look into his twinkling gray eyes.

"Do you remember those queer syllables that Fanenna repeated to us that night when she told us her story, the syllables that neither she nor I understood?"

Then, mimicking her strange guttural voice (and I will admit that even now the mere sound of it made me shiver a little), he said, "Ouan feef, ti oues. Ten sout."

Over and over he repeated them, his smile growing broader and more tantalizing, as I still failed to understand. Then, all at once, I got it.

"One fifty west. Ten south!" I shouted.

"Not so loud," he said in mock alarm. "Ashton might hear you. And, on the whole," he added, smiling thoughtfully, but still half-seriously, "on the whole, I'd rather Ashton didn't know."

"You can show him the letter, at any rate," said I.

There came a knock at the door just then, a knock we knew.

"Come in," called the doctor. "Come in, Ashton. Here's a letter that may interest you."

NATIONAL LEAGUE TORN WIDE OPEN

Boston Came From Behind and Won Out in 1914.

Rabbit Maranville, recently rescued from the International league to aid in bolstering the faltering St. Louis Cardinals, is about the last of that gallant band which tore the National league wide open in the hectic summer of 1914 and won the first and last National pennant for Boston.

The story is now a legend of baseball—how the Boston Braves, despised occupants of the National league cellar up to the middle of the campaign, suddenly began the most amazing dash the major leagues ever saw.

Up went the Braves, up, up and up from eighth to seventh to sixth, into the first division, up, up and up to the top and into the world series, where waited the great and glorious Philadelphia Athletics. The Braves were going so fast they didn't have time to stop and be awed by the Mackian might, but tore through that series, winning four straight games and the world championship.

And now only Rabbit Maranville remains. Gone is the great infield of Butch Schmidt, Johnny Evers and Charley Deal. Gone is the great outfield which boasted Catcher, Connolly and Moran, Dick Rudolph, Big Bill James and Lefty Tyler were the pitchers, while Hank Goudy caught.

George Stallings, the Braves' manager and first "miracle man" of baseball, is also out of the big leagues. He recently resigned as manager of the Rochester International league club to "rest up" at least a year.

Rudolph recently pitched in a game for the Braves against Cincinnati, but his showing was such that he is not likely to be called upon for much more duty in the big time and can hardly be called active.

Maranville showed enough of his old-time stuff while with Rochester in the International that he looks like a fair bet with the Cards. He may be old as baseball men go, but he is also baseball wise and brains matured on the diamond are often more valuable than youth and springy muscles.

Maranville's specialty is snagging pop flies.

Swedish Girl Swimmer Just Misses a Record

A Swedish girl, Miss Marianne Gustavson, narrowly missed the world record for 200-meter breaststroke swimming recently. She covered the distance in 3:19, or within four-fifths of a second of the listed standard by Miss Marie Baron of Holland.

Swedish experts now are predicting confidently that Miss Gustavson soon will attain international rating, and the prophecy seems amply warranted inasmuch as girl swimmers usually improve very rapidly in their early teens. Moreover, as 20 meters is the Olympic breaststroke course, it looks as if the newly developed young nejad may have to be seriously reckoned with at next year's games.

Texas Southpaw Cursed With Slice Wins Title

The golfing duffer who curses his slice every time he hits the ball may gain some consolation from the fact that Texas has a slicing champion who is wearing the state amateur crown.

Lewis Levinsen of San Antonio, who always slices, and is left handed, fought his way to the title through a field of the best golfers in the state. Levinsen's left-handed slice bothers him considerably, but he has learned to make allowance for it and arrive at the green by the Great Circle route almost as well as the man who plays them straight down the fairway.

Unable to See Into Newton's Giant Mind

While Isaac Newton was making a study of the refraction of light upon thin plates, as exemplified in the soap bubble, a neighbor woman who saw him experimenting mistook him for a trifler. "He diverts himself in the oddest ways imaginable," she said. "Every morning when the sun shines so brightly that we are obliged to draw the window blinds, he takes his seat in front of a tub of soap suds, and occupies himself for hours blowing soap bubbles through a common clay pipe and intently watching them till they burst."

Newton's acquaintances testified to his self-forgetfulness and humility. "I do not know, he said of himself, "how I may appear to the world, but to myself I seem to have been only like a boy playing on the seashore, now and then finding a smoother pebble or a prettier shell than before, while the great ocean of truth lay all undiscovered before me."—Kansas City Times.

Is It Your Nerves?

Bakersfield, Calif.—"I had a nervous breakdown, unable to leave my bed. I was under the care of a doctor, but was not getting along as well as I thought I should, so I started taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it is the tonic and nervine that restored me to health. Its soothing effect upon my nerves was wonderful while taking the first bottle, but I continued its use until I had taken five bottles and was then completely restored to health. I have never had a physical or a nervous breakdown since, which proves the thoroughness of the 'Prescription' in reaching the source of the trouble and then overcoming it."—Mrs. Gertrude Higley, 1224 Truxton Ave. All dealers.

Church Seeks Motorists

Country ministers in England are becoming more and more anxious to make the automobilist welcome at church, and more than 500 of them have offered to provide parking space for automobiles, states the secretary of the Owner-Drivers' club, in London. In many instances clergymen are offering their own grounds for parking cars, while in others suitable space close by is suggested. There are also numerous cases in which a clergyman, in offering parking facilities, adds the hope that the motorist visiting his church will make himself known after the service, so that the minister can exchange greetings.

See our stuff.

A sure way to lose control of your car—forget to make a payment.

There's no use trying to joke with a woman. The other day Jones heard a good conundrum and decided to try it on his wife.

"Do you know why I am like a mule?" he asked.

"No," she replied. "I know you are, but I don't know why."

Now's the time to buy your winter coal.

Parents who disobey their children are a problem.

He (noticing cow and calf in field rubbing noses in bovine love: "The sight of that makes me want to do the same thing."

She: "Go to it—that's our cow."

The only thing that ever accomplishes anything by just running around is a circular saw.

"Oh, officer! There's a man following me, and I think he must be drunk."

"Yes," agreed the officer, as he gave her the once over, "I think he must be."

American Block and Aberdeen, the coals that satisfy.

"Now, Johnny," said the indignant mother, what do little boys get for telling lies?"

Johnny (after a moment's thought): "They get to ride for half fare."

"I keep on reading about capital and labor, but I can never understand about it."

"But it's simple. You give me ten dollars; that's the capital."

"And the labor?"

"That's what you have getting it back from me!"
